Meade The Ninth Corps was moved by rail to Annapolis, where it was recruited up to about twenty-five thousand men. As the time for action neared it was set in motion, and by easy marches reached and re-enforced the Army of the Potomac on the morning of the 6th of May. in the midst of the battle of the Wilderness. It was not formally incorporated with that army until later, but by a sort of Action, it was held to be a distinct army, Burnside acting in concert with Meade, and receiving his orders directly from Grant, as did Meade. These two armies were the excuse for Grant s personal presence, without actually superseding Meade. In my opinion the great soldier of the Army of the Potomac at this time was General Humphreys. He was the chief of staff to General Meade and was a strategist, a tactician, and an engineer. Humphreys was a lighter, too, and in this an exception to most engineers. He was a very interesting figure. He used to ride about in a black felt hat. the brim of which was turned down all around, making him look like a Quaker. He was very pleasing to deal with, unless you were fighting against him. and then he was not so pleasant. [He was a Quaker by descent.] Humphreys was a very charming man. quite destitute of vanity. I think he had consented to go and serve with Meade as chief of staff out of pure patriotism. He preferred an active command, and eventually on the eve of the end,...
